

ABSTRACT

A lockable protective cap for a post is disclosed. The protective cap comprises a sidewall having a first end and an open second end. The sidewall forms a post receiving opening for receiving a post through the open second end. The cap further comprises a cover at least partially closing the first end of the sidewall and a locking member extending from the sidewall for engaging an engageable surface of the post.